Father: Kartik is a blind. Let me tell you the story of his childhood. Kartik studied in Delhi Public School in New Delhi. He was a smart and bright student. Kartik did well in all subjects but he liked science the most. Everything was good for Kartik till his 10th standard. After scoring full marks in 10th standard public exam, Kartik wanted to study Science in 11th and 12th standard.

Farhan: I am sure he got it. He got full marks in 10th exam!

Father: No. Actually, the government rule in Delhi did not allow blind children to study Science after 10th standard.

Farhan: I do not think that's fair. Everyone should be able to study what they like!

Father: This is what Kartik also felt. He loved Science and he wanted to study that. He refused to let his disability come in the way. He challenged the government and held campaigns to get permission. Finally, after nine months, he got permission to study Science. Not only that, he made sure that all blind students have permission to study Science if they want!

Farhan: Wow! 9 months! It is so long! I am sure I would have given up.

Father: Change takes time Farhan. We should work hard and be patient if we want to see change happen around us. Like Kartik who was the first blind student in India to study Science.

Farhan: What did Kartik do after that?

Father: Kartik's dream and passion were never limited. His love for Science helped him get more than 95% in his 12th board exam. His dream was to study in an IIT. Indian Institute of Technology is one of the best colleges in our country!

Farhan: I want to study in IIT too!

Father: Good! But only if you want to study Science. Every subject has different best colleges. We will talk about that some other day.
