The Tamils in Fiji have always voiced their need for equal rights. As a part of this a women's wing was formed in 1938 called the Indian Sanmarga Maathar Sangam. The purpose of this wing was to set aside one handful of rice each day before cooking so that poor and hungry Tamils can be fed.

The book named Thirukurali was launched by Ratu Joni, the Vice-president of Fiji. He said that the book will help to promote peace and multiculturalism in Fiji. This book was a Fijian version of the ancient Tamil book 'Thirukkural'.

The Siva Subramaniya temple is a Hindu temple located in Nadi, Fiji.
